

Motyum Inzolia

SICILY

Inzolia or Ansonica is a white Italian wine grape planted primarily in western Sicily where it can be used to produce Marsala wine. The grape is noted for its nutty aroma.

Motyum Nero d'Avola

SICILY

Nero d'Avola ("Black of Avola") is the most important red wine grape in Sicily and is one of Italy's most important indigenous varieties. It is named after Avola in the far south of Sicily and its wines are compared to New World Shirazes, with sweet tannins and plum or peppery flavors.
